National Army Museum

Description:

The National Army Museum is based in Chelsea and provides a unique insight into the way our army has functioned so successfully over its history and as such retains a special place within our country's heart and culture, as does the building which houses these exhibits and safeguards our history and many valuable items

The building was purpose built in the 1970s and is open to the general public 7 days a week with visits from a range of schools and associations through out the year..

An on site engineering presence 5 days per week with weekend and out of hours attendance as needed is essential to the smooth running of this landmark building.

Hemlow has provided the site engineers, management systems and technical backup required to run this complex property for the last 5 years.

This building is maintained via our Greenwich operations team
